Suisse Haus

Food
&
Spirits
Monroe, WI

In 1839, Jarvis Rattan, a wealthy Yankee who owned all of Monroe at the time, sold the countryside upon which the Suisse Haus now stands to Jacob Lybrand. Lybrand platted and then donated his paper city of Monroe to the village, as long as he could pick one lot for himself on the courthouse square and five lots off the square. Suisse Haus was built on one of the lots off the square. Because of the nearby spring (across the street), Monroe was made county seat, with four different court houses eventually being built.

Anton Miller, an immigrant from Baden-Baden, Germany, bought this corner of the block in 1854 to build and sell furniture, coffins, and cheese tubs. By 1880, he converted the assemblage of buildings on the grounds (four together) into the City Hotel, commonly called, "The City Box", and operated it as a hotel and bar. When he died in 1884, 12 of the 25 children he fathered made their way to his funeral.

For 132 years, Suisse Haus has been a well-known hotel or now boarding house and tavern in Monroe. In the past, many immigrant cheese makers called the upstairs rooming house their first home, while awaiting employment in the many Swiss cheese factories in the Green County area. The newer dining room once housed Bernet's Cheese and Sausage Shop, which featured imported items from Switzerland. This is the second oldest building in the downtown square area.

Suisse Haus invites you to relax with us and enjoy a moment of fine food and spirits.
